Digital Concrete 2020

Digital fabrication is taking the concrete construction industry by storm. In recognition of the potential in terms of reduced labor and material use, increased geometrical freedom and related cost and emission reductions, a swiftly expanding group of academics and practitioners from around the globe is researching and developing the associated technologies, materials, and applications.

Digital Concrete is the primary platform for key innovators and top researchers to exchange insights and discuss findings in this fascinating field. The first edition in 2018 at the ETH in Zurich, Switzerland, was a great success and already saw >100 presentations and 275 participants, of which 40% from industry.
